

LIZ + THE BAGUETTES

Liz + the Baguettes | EPK

“Nice girls don’t go there. Nice girls go nowhere.”

Weird Venn diagram, but it works: post-punk (Replacements, Talking Heads), experimental pop (LCD Soundsystem, St. Vincent), and alt-country (Brandi Carlile). Liz + the Baguettes are dead center—crunchy, sharp-witted, and twangry.

Watch the video for “White Flag”

Listen to the Highway Gothic album preview

The band is the project of songwriter/lead singer Liz Bagby, working in close collaboration with Charlie Crane (guitar/drums), Thomas Zeitner (bass), and Zachary Sigelko (drums/guitar). It grew out of Chicago’s storefront theater scene, with band members first playing together in productions with Strange Tree. The band’s name came about as a joke on Chicago Acoustic Underground, and it’s too late to change it now.

Guest contributors have included Julie Jurgens (trumpet, vocals), David Chervony (bass), Sarah Scanlon (keyboard, vocals), Liesl Downey (vocals), Scott Cupper (French horn), and Andy Miles (drums).

Liz + the Baguettes joined Chicago indie label ButterBean Records with the release of the 2018 Record Store Day single “Candy”/“Midway.”

PR Contact

Charlie Crane, ButterBean Records
1461 East Algonquin Rd
Des Plaines, IL 60016
630-408-5419
champagneorslimfast@gmail.com

The Baguettes

lizandthebaguettes.com
facebook.com/DammitBagby/
Twitter: @LizBagby
Instagram: @LizBagby
elizabethbagby.bandcamp.com reverbnation.com/elizabethbagby
soundcloud.com/bagby

Highway Gothic

ButterBean Records will release Highway Gothic on March 29, 2019.

This is an album of and about the American road, with its false promises of escape. The album's name comes from the font used on highway signs.

The protagonists of Highway Gothic are in various stages of discovering they have been sold out by the American dream. An unemployed oil worker, in thrall to pornographic images of vigilante justice, plots a mass shooting ("Badlands"). A social media addict loses her grip on real life ("Subourbon"). A pair of lovers snatch at an hour of happiness away from their dying marriages ("The Age and the Ache"). A woman decides against having children in the midst of environmental collapse ("Gen X"). Together, the songs depict individuals coming to grips with a world ordered against them, a society in which "every road's a cul-de-sac." A raucous bit of hope arrives in "DGAF," whose lyrics match its chords.

Found noise permeates Highway Gothic, from the playgrounds of "Subourbon" to the semi trucks of "Badlands." For "Teflon," Crane created a percussion track of modem scratches and whines. Sounds of housework gradually eclipse a woman's voice in "After All."

Discography

The Baguettes released their first studio album, Everything I Think I Know Is Wrong, in late 2015. They put out a Record Store Day double single, "Candy"/"Midway," in 2018.

Demo versions of many album tracks, as well as a number of online-exclusive singles and spoofs, are available on ReverbNation, Soundcloud, and Bandcamp.

The band refers to its sound as post-country.

Live Performance

A Baguettes show is typically interactive, upbeat, and funny. By band tradition, all the evening's acts are invited to join an all-play song at the end of the night.

Band Members

Liz Bagby ("dazzling," "a brilliant comic actress with legs for days") has performed in about fifty productions and composed music for a dozen, including Strange Tree's Three Faces of Dr. Crippen (Best of NY Fringe 2014). Also an award-winning writer, she was one of twenty-seven artists to take part in the 2014 Arctic Circle Arts Expedition, a residency aboard a tall-mast ship exploring the fjords and glaciers of Svalbard. She will spend two months of 2019 living in an Airstream to direct the roots music for Ballad of Romeo & Juliet with Asheville's American Myth Center.

Charlie Crane drums for the Dyes and has played almost every instrument on tour with the Parasites. His alter ego Charlie O'Brian is one-third of the Unswept. He hosts the music podcast Stereo Hysteria, and works in the AV section of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, where some of Highway Gothic was recorded. Apart from guitar and drums, on the album he plays bass, modem, and bourbon bottle.

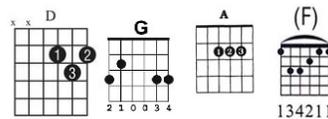

Thomas Zeitner met Crane on a TMBG fan site, and shortly thereafter the two began playing (with Bagby and Ryan Gatenby) as the Loudness War. He played on most of Highway Gothic but has lived in Hawaii since late 2016; David Chervony replaces him in live shows.

Zachary Sigelko missed most of the recording sessions for Highway Gothic because he was working on Ameya Pawar's gubernatorial campaign (the band does not take "political music" lightly). He plays drums, guitar, and mandolin and works as a video artist (Battle Flag).

Images

Credit: Johnny Knight

Credit: Johnny Knight

Please visit http://www.dropbox.com/home/Liz + the Baguettes hi-res images for high-resolution versions of all images.

Links

Soundcloud

Bandcamp

ReverbNation

iTunes

YouTube